I reconstructed the minisculpture texts as accurately as possible, considering the shadows and hidden letters. Assuming that all panels have the same width, I concluded that, indeed, GIRASOL exists on both ends of the top row of the GIRASOL tableau. This mimics the “extra L” row in the Kryptos tableau which has GHIJL in it twice, at the beginning and end of the row in that instance. Notice what is in the box near the middle. GIRASOL lies directly below GHIJKL. This is not merely a coincidence, and is why only 15 rows of the standard tableau are presented in the way that they are.

(Jason Mulrenin reportedly also found that the GIRASOL tableau (shown in lower left) has GIRASOL twice in each row.)
